

Tit, Boobs and Jugs - Two Hong Kong Female Artists Exhibit at 10 Chancery Lane Gallery

Hong Kong February 17, 2006 --- These are what your mother, boss, wife and long term girlfriend have. They are available for private showings, but mostly are not to be brushed up against or acknowledged in public with anything more than cursory glances. Breasts are part of a whole person, and are to be regarded, at least on most occasions, with the same inert response one gives arms or earlobes. The sensual power is undeniable, but when dealing with breasts belonging to women in your life you hold love or respect for, it is best to let any erotic charge they might hold languish in the background...or not. Hong Kong artists Irene Lau Kwai Ying and Winus Lee Yee Mei explore the female breast in their new ceramic works showing at the 10 Chancery Lane Gallery from February 17 - March 6, 2006.
